

IFN
Island Food
NETWORK

	Food SYSTEMS	Food COMMUNITIES	Food ACTION
What does the IFN do?	We connect big-picture planning and community efforts	We strengthen local relationships to grow our impact	We get behind community food initiatives
What does this look like in action?	We build and hold relationships with key food actors locally, regionally, and across sectors [e.g. vested partnerships with Feed NS and Department of OSD) We mobilize the Shared Food Vision as a strategic framework for collaboration	We get to know people and connect them around aligned interests We convene food actors to create new pathways for impact We host events and opportunities for exchange and celebration	We bring community food leaders together to support each other, find new paths, and share stories of change We create impact sharing tools that are useful to the network
What will be different as a result of the IFN?	Existing food action is amplified and new, strategic opportunities are emerging	There is alignment and connectivity across the network; we feel like a community of food leaders	Food needs and impact of initiatives are understood and shared Community food leaders are freed up to focus on creating positive community change

As a food community, we are building a future where everyone in Unama'ki can access good food—and where food systems reflect the strength, culture, and care of the people who sustain them.
